

PUBLIC CONTRIBUTORS WANTED

Help improve support for internationally recruited doctors & nurses in the UK

Health and care services in the UK rely heavily on doctors and nurses recruited from overseas, yet many face challenges that affect whether they are able to stay and build long-term careers. We are running a four-year research project to better understand these issues and improve support for internationally recruited doctors and nurses.

We are looking for eight Public Contributors to work with us on this project. Public Contributors will share views and experiences, give feedback on interviews and surveys, help check that findings make sense, and support decisions about how results are shared with the public.

We welcome people from a wide range of backgrounds and are keen to involve a diverse group of contributors. The time commitment is spread across four years (60-70 hours total) and includes mostly online meetings, with one in-person meeting per year in Oxford.
