

Call for Patients and Public Contributors - Prostate Cancer Research

Share your experience to help improve prostate cancer research inclusion!

We are looking to connect with men from African or Caribbean backgrounds who have experience with prostate cancer and research participation.

This includes individuals who:

- Have donated tissue samples to research
- Were invited to take part in research but chose not to
- Have perspectives on being approached for research participation
- Are interested to learn more about our study

The aim is to better understand:

- What influences decisions to take part (or not) in research
- What aspects of the process work well or need improvement
- How researchers can design studies that are more inclusive, respectful, and relevant to African-Caribbean communities

We are particularly interested in hearing from those who were offered the opportunity to participate but declined.

Your insights will directly inform the design of a study focused on understanding how prostate cancer develops in Black men and help improve how research is conducted in underrepresented populations.

This is not recruitment into a study, but an opportunity to share experiences and shape future research. If you are open to a conversation or would like more information, please get in touch by scanning the QR code above.
