Why do clinical trial participants stop taking part? Help us improve how researchers and participants can explore reasons for stopping

How would you feel if someone asked you why you had dropped out of a trial?

We are looking for several more public contributors for the Y Study.

- The Y Study is about participants' reasons for stopping participation in clinical trials.
- We want to make a template and guidance for researchers, to help them ask participants why they want to stop taking part. This could make participants more comfortable to share their reasons for stopping.
- The project lead is Will Cragg at the University of Leeds (w.cragg@leeds.ac.uk). You can hear Will explain a bit more about the project in this short video: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=20xxqk4ySao

What's involved?

- Being a contributor would involve meetings, group discussions and requests to help outside of meetings. The project will last until around April 2028.

Interested?

- You can find the expression of interest form at https://app.onlinesurveys.jisc.ac.uk/s/leeds/y-study, or use the QR code.
- Deadline for expressions of interest: end of December 2026.
